Many restaurants today have gotten around the concept of quality dining. They are simply one step above a fast food restaurant chain. The quality of the food is horrible and the service is just as terrible. You spend a lot of money but get nothing in return. This is why private dining is such a joy. People really care about you. They want to provide top notch service. As they aren't operating on a quantity basis they are able to devote more time and attention to each individual customer. This means that you will actually enjoy your meal and not feel that you've been cheated by the price that is asked when the bill comes. It doesn't matter if the meal is inexpensive if the quality of the food and the service is not up to par. When you enjoy your meal you'll gladly come back again.

If you want to keep revisiting all the overpriced and underserviced restaurants in the past that didn't satisfy you, you will never be happy. Why not try something new? If you are in the London area you can truly find out what you are missing by going to Boisedale in Belgravia. You won't regret it.
